2012 YEAR IN REVIEW

Each and every day, 19,000 children under the age of five die from causes we can prevent. One year ago, this number was 21,000.

In just one year, two thousand more children have survived, each and every day. They are surviving thanks to the help of donors like you.

But these are still shocking numbers. Even one preventable child death is one too many. That’s why at UNICEF, we go where the need is great and we save children’s lives – no matter how difficult or complex the situation might be, no matter how far a child and their family might be.

Reaching every child is not a distant dream. You have stood with us in our belief that no child is too far.

As you read this Year in Review, know that your support has helped UNICEF save millions of children – children in dire circumstances over the past year.

Your support in 2012 was invaluable and will be absolutely essential on the road ahead as together we fight to save even more children’s lives.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

David Morley

UNICEF IMPACT

Active in more than 190 countries around the world, together with your support, we save more children's lives than any other humanitarian organization. As part of the UN, we have the reach, the experience and the expertise to help children survive. Your donations are put to optimum use – supporting programs, delivering supplies and reaching the hardest-to-reach.

Here is an overview of our achievements in 2011-2012:

EMERGENCIES

UNICEF responded to 292 emergencies – from civil conflicts to floods, cyclones, and earthquakes – in 80 countries, procuring $166 million worth of emergency supplies, half of that total to assist children in the drought-stricken Horn of Africa. The global UNICEF humanitarian response supported:

- improved education for 4 million children
- vaccination, deworming, and vitamin A supplementation for over 36 million children
- severe acute malnutrition treatment for 1.8 million children under five
- targeted nutritional support for 19 million women and children
- sanitation, hygiene, or safe drinking water for 16 million people

CHILD DEVELOPMENT

UNICEF

- spent $106 million to deliver education supplies and learning materials
- helped give over 10 million children access to safe water, sanitation, and hygiene facilities in their learning environments
- purchased 159,970 classroom kits, 22,523 recreation kits, and 9,979 early childhood development kits
- worked with partners to help 8.76 million school-age children access basic education and provide 2 million children with access to safe community play and learning spaces

CHILD SURVIVAL

UNICEF

- bought $1.03 billion in vaccines, $97 million in medical supplies and equipment, and 20.8 million HIV diagnostic tests
- worked with partners to immunize over 52 million children against measles
- delivered 25 million bed nets and 11.7 million malaria rapid diagnostic tests to protect children from mosquito-borne diseases in 36 countries
- spent $70 million on water and sanitation supplies, delivering 347 million water purification tablets and 78,159 hygiene kits
- procured 27,000 metric tons of ready-to-use therapeutic food – 80 percent of the global supply – and 140 million packets of micronutrient powder

CHILD PROTECTION

UNICEF

- worked in 102 countries to strengthen programs for children in national development plans and budgets
- helped achieve a 30 percent increase in communities abandoning genital mutilation and cutting in 15 countries
- championed the adoption of new rules and laws against child marriage in Azerbaijan and India
- integrated almost 12,000 child soldiers back into society
- helped introduce child justice legislation in Albania, “zero child labour” initiatives in Bolivia, and universal, compulsory birth registration in Malawi

GLOBAL REACH

Every day around the world, 11,000 UNICEF workers equip themselves to go as far as necessary to save children's lives. For UNICEF the goal is simple: child survival. The reason is simple too: because no child is too far. We go wherever the need is great, no matter how complex the problem, no matter how rough the terrain, no matter how remote the location.
